THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE

Attempts to end Utah's abortion court fight fizzled in the final frantic hours of the Legislature Wednesday.

But Gov. Mike Leavitt held out the promise of a special session of the Legislature if negotiations succeed in developing an acceptable amendment to the state's 1991 anti-abortion law.

The governor's office said in a prepared statement that he is forming a group of his staff, lawmakers and doctors on both sides of the dispute to talk behind closed doors.

"Intense negotiations" will go forward and the governor is willing to call lawmakers back in special session in April if a deal can be cut.

On Wednesday, Mr. Leavitt met with University of Utah physicians who, with the American Civil Liberties Union of Utah, have filed an appeal in the ACLU suit against the abortion law.

But the governor said, "I'm very concerned that negotiating and enacting any change to our existing abortion law during the final hours of the legislative session represents considerable risk for error."

ACLU attorney Kathryn Kendell said the physicians she represents have been "willing to give up" much in the compromise negotiations.

"If that's not good enough for the minority of ideologues on the other side, I don't know how much more we can give up," Ms. Kendell said.

Senate Minority Leader Scott Howell, D-Sandy, blamed the "extreme right" in the abortion debate for obstructing a settlement.

Eagle Forum of Utah President Gayle Ruzicka said she and other anti-abortion activists oppose liberalization of abortion laws. But "we're willing to look at anything they bring us."

Last December, federal Judge J. Thomas Greene struck down the law's central ban on most elective abortions.

But the ACLU last month appealed provisions that restrict abortions after the 21st week of pregnancy, upheld by the court. Tuesday, the state attorney general filed a counter-appeal.

The case, which to date has cost taxpayers $800,000, has been placed on hold for at least 30 days. Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Stephen Anderson granted a stay for that period, said Asst. Atty. Gen. Jerry Jensen.

Clay-Mines Measure Fails to Pass House

Clay mines will continue to be regulated by the state and subject to reclamation requirements.

An agreement to that effect was reached Wednesday between the Utah Division of Oil, Gas and Mining and Sen. Mike Dmitrich, D-Price, who had introduced legislation to exempt some clay-mine operations from the state's Mined Land Reclamation Act.

Mr. Dmitrich's bill passed the Senate easily, but was defeated in the House.

Geneva Sales-Tax Exemption Extended

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Geneva Steel on Wednesday put on a last-minute lobbying blitz and, with the help of some legislative leaders and unions, won a two-year extension of its exemption from state sales taxes.

The Senate passed the measure 20-9 following emotional and sometimes angry debate that had opponents claiming leaders were ramrodding the bill without adequate debate.

Sen. John Holmgren, R-Bear River City, complained that Senate President Arnold Christensen limited debate on the floor after allowing Geneva attorneys and lobbyists almost a half-hour to hype the measure during lunch Wednesday.

Another of the state's large steel mills, Nucor, is in Holmgren's district.

The bill extends for two years an exemption granted to Geneva seven years ago when the aging steel mill reopened. The goal was to help the locally owned mill afford necessary and expensive renovations.
